CONTINUANCE OF FLIGHT HELD UP ACCOUNT OF ICE

Airmen Insistent Jour- ney Can be Continu- ed Very Soon

ADD CONTINUANCE OF FLIGHT HELD UP ACCOUNT OF ICE

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The World flight of the American army aviators who already have completed 21,000 miles in their efforts to circle the earth, seemed in danger of being abandoned today owing to the ice conditions off Greenland, which are declared to be the worst in 20 years.

Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, who is in command of the flight and Major Crumrine of the American army air service were called into consultation by Rear-Admiral Thomas J. Magruder on board the cruiser Richmond to consider the question of calling off the flight for this season.

Both Lieutenant Smith and Major Crumrine argued that there still were hopes for completing the projected hops from Iceland to Greenland and thence to Labrador.

The result of the conference was an order to the cruiser Raleigh to proceed to Greenland waters and explore the coast for a possible landing place for the planes. The steamer Gertrude Task with supplies on board for the aviators and which is ice-bound 15 miles from Angmagssalik, reported today by wireless that there had been no change in the ice conditions. Admiral Magruder then is said to have decided to call off the flight unless there were continuous reports for continuing.

He called Captain Watts of the Raleigh, Lieutenant Smith, Major Crumrine and Flight Commander Leighton of the cruiser division into conference and it was decided to dispatch the Raleigh from Reykjavik to the east coast of Greenland tomorrow. If no harbor is found as a haven for the planes in Greenland, the alternative of refueling them from the Raleigh on the open sea will be considered, although the fliers regard this a desperate expedition.

Lieutenant Smith and Major Crumrine are unwilling to give up the flight at this stage. They argue that the weather conditions in Greenland are best between August 15 and September 1 and favor remaining here until good reports are received. It is expected that several days will elapse before the Raleigh is able to explore the east Greenland coast and make a report on conditions there.

LIST OF UNEMPLOYED IN STATE IS LARGER THAN IN MANY YEARS

Decline Due to Hot Weather, Vacations and Plant Shut-Downs

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Industrial conditions in Illinois have shown the largest decline during the month of July, that has been shown since employment statistics were first compiled in the state according to a review of the industrial situation in Illinois for the month of July by the Illinois department of labor. The decline is said to be due to hot weather, vacations and the shutdown of plants for repairs in preparation for the fall season.

The downward revision in industrial operations, the report states, set in a year ago and the month of July comes as a climax. In the year, the employment index has been carried from a point 14 per cent above the average of 1922 to a point 3.6 per cent below that level. The month's discharges have reduced the level of factory operations to that of October 1921.

The summary of the industrial situation was taken from reports of 11,911 manufacturers located in almost 160 cities which employ about 40 per cent of the factory workers of the state. The manufacturers have laid off 12,422 persons during the month of July. In the past year, the report states, 135,000 persons have been added to the ranks of the unemployed by industry.

In the mines of the state there are many men out of work the report continues. Many mines, in operation last year, are now idle, while others are operating two or three days each week. Sharp declines were reported in metal and machinery while in the agricultural implement industry several concerns are said to have gone into the hands of receivers. Automobile, stone, clay, and glass industries also laid off many men during the month of July.

Boot and shoe manufacturers now in the midst of their fall season were also obliged to lay off additional workers. A decline is also reported in the chemical and painting industry and knit goods factories laid off more than one third of the workers in July.

The decline in employment in July was more severe in the case of women than of men. There was a decline of 200 during July of the placements by the Illinois Free Employment Bureau, 10,616 persons securing positions as a result of the bureau's office. In July 1923, 16,652 persons were placed.

In Chicago, the report states, there were in excess of two persons per job in July this year, in Cicero more than three and in Danville nearly five.

Storms Do Damage In Three Central States

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—(AP)—More than half a dozen persons are dead, a score injured, and property damage estimated at upwards of $2,000,000 caused as a result of terrific storms last night and today in Wisconsin, Iowa, and Illinois.

Chicago, which was hardest hit, reported six deaths while the loss of life in that state from storms throughout the week mounted to fifteen.

The heavy rains which in some sections were accompanied by high winds and reached the proportions of tornadoes, were directed tonight by Professor Henry J. Cox of the weather bureau here as "dumb bell" storms.

Chicago, he said, is on the shank of a storm area in the form of a great dumb bell with its ends in St. Paul and Kansas City. The shank section bore the brunt of wind and rain.

Three central west counties of Wisconsin were hit the hardest in last night's and today's rains. Damage is estimated at upwards of $1,000,000 while loss of life was experienced in this section and many were injured. Hundreds of farmers were left practically destitute the avalanche of water destroying crops, flooding farm homes, forcing streams to flood tide, ripping down trees and wire communications and washing out more than 200 bridges in the state. The Red Cross today took steps to aid the needy and destitute there.

Illinois and Iowa already soaked by heavy rains earlier in the week were visited by a heavy downpour today that added to the damage already done. Crops bearing the brunt of the injury. In Chicago the rain was driven by a fifty-four mile gale and did thousands of dollars damage in a few minutes. One death was reported from the storm in Iowa, a woman near Granger being killed while a tricycle on which she was riding was struck by lightning. Two were killed at Black River, Wis., one near Osseo, one near New Auburn and one at Bloomer.

The unsettled weather with its tempest of storms and thunder-shower, struck the entire area and will probably continue until Sunday when fair weather is anticipated. The weather bureau here indicated early tonight.

COOLIDGE PLANS VACATION AFTER HE IS NOTIFIED

Will go to Parents' Vermont Home for 10 or 12 Days

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Satisfied with the progress of the Republican campaign, President Coolidge decided after receiving a report on the situation today from Chairman Butler of the national committee to take a vacation of 10 or 12 days shortly after the notification exercises to be held here August 14.

Mr. Coolidge plans to go to his father's home at Plymouth, Vt., following a custom of many years. Mrs. Coolidge and their son John, will accompany the remainder of the party. It will be the first time Mr. Coolidge has left the white house for more than two days since he entered office a year ago. At Plymouth Mr. Coolidge was administered the oath of office by his father early in the morning following the death of President Harding last August.

Despite his ability to keep going in the intense heat which has prevailed here during the last week, friends have urged the president to take the rest point after the difficulties under which he has worked the past year coming into office so suddenly and the strain he and Mrs. Coolidge were under during the recent illness and death of their younger son, Calvin Jr.

The president made known today after the conference with Mr. Butler his satisfaction with the progress reported but joined with the national committee chairman in planning a vigorous campaign. Also after the conference Mr. Butler announced the Republican fight would be carried into the northwestern states considered as the stronghold of Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin independent candidate in response to the advice of many party leaders who have declared sentiment in that territory is markedly strong for the Coolidge-Dawes ticket.

Reports generally from the country Mr. Coolidge said after visiting to the Chicago and New York office of the national committee show an enthusiastic display of confidence in the character, ability and fitness of President Coolidge and General Dawes.

PHYSICIAN SAYS BOYS UNHEALTHY THROUGHOUT LIVES

Fourth Specialist Cal- led Says Loeb Men- tally Diseased

CHICAGO, Aug. 8. (AP)—A procession of eight college boys, finally giving way to Dr. Harold S. Hulbert, fourth of the defense mental specialists, took the witness stand today before Judge John R. Caverly and gave evidence in support of the plea for mitigation in the sentencing of Nathan F. Leopold Jr., and Richard Loeb, for the kidnapping and murdering of Robert Franks.

The university students, mostly friends of Loeb, testified as to their observations of the youths' peculiar mannerisms and mental mechanism as revealed to them on campus and in fraternity houses. They occupied the entire morning session except for four minutes when Dr. Robert Bruce Armstrong of Charlevoix, Mich., gave evidence regarding a slight accident to Loeb in 1920.

Dr. Hulbert going over the lives of the defendants from cradle days concluded that Loeb "is mentally," and had not reached his conclusions as to Leopold when court was adjourned until tomorrow after he had been on the stand two hours.

Dr. Hulbert corroborated the testimony of Dr. Bernard Glueck of New York that Loeb was a "cold" child, that he struck the boy several times with a cold chisel intending to stun him and strangle him later with the assistance of Leopold, but that the blows were sufficient to cause death said Dr. Hulbert.

That Loeb had discussed the Franks murder with his mother, getting quite a kick out of it also was testified by the psychiatrist. He revealed that Loeb saw the funeral of his victim and "felt a bit uncomfortable but not remorseful" when he saw Bobby's boy friends carry his coffin from the Franks home.

Dr. Hulbert delved into the realm of pre-natal influences in seeking causes for the various defects that his thirteen examinations of the youth revealed to him. He testified he had learned from the physical ailment before his birth, remained an invalid and died 17 years later, and that Loeb's mother, just before his birth was sickly and also suffered from several acute infections.

Loeb, the witness testified, was backward physically during his babyhood, had a badly formed heart, a sub-normal temperature, retains three of his baby teeth and at the age of 18 his voice still was changing. Leopold was slight in boyhood, suffered a serious gastric disorder, always had a skin disease and was affected more than ordinarily by various diseases common to infancy and childhood, he said.

Both Leopold and Loeb early began to have phantasies and pictured themselves quite differently from the imaginary selves normal boys dream of, said the pathologist. Leopold's phantasies grew from the age of five when he saw his brother in a soldier's uniform and dreamed of being in command of a huge body of men. That worked into a "king-slave" phantasy stated the doctor, Leopold at times picturing himself as a king but 90 percent of the time as a slave protecting his kingdom and carrying the phantasies into real life and sought somebody to whom he could surrender himself as an abject slave, concluded Dr. Hulbert.

"Loeb's phantasies, concentrated on the planning of crime, were abnormal in that they were ignoble and that they persisted too long in life, said the specialist.

Two of the young university men told of their conversations with Leopold in which he had elaborated to them on his idea of the superman and indicated that it was an outgrowth of his close communion with the Nietzschean. They said Leopold was prone to regard himself as a superman, who could "do no wrong" but that he regarded Loeb as "the greatest man in the world."

The prosecution offered but little cross-examination. Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, said it was unnecessary and that he was getting the biggest laughs of his life from the testimony.

ACCEPTANCE OF PLAN POSTPONED AWAITING DECISION OF FRANCE

Premier And War Minister Differ on Evacuation of Ruhr

LONDON, Aug. 8. (AP)—Premier Herriot, War Minister Clemenceau and Finance Minister Poincare will go to Paris tomorrow for a cabinet conference and the negotiations of the international conference here will be virtually suspended until they return.

Action by the French cabinet was necessitated by the fact that the question of evacuation of the Ruhr is the chief obstacle to any final agreement of the conference and also because M. Herriot and General Nollet are reported to be in disagreement on this important matter.

The French premier promises to return to the British capital Monday and in the meantime all news will be turned toward Paris where it is expected M. Herriot will confer with the members of his cabinet regarding the final stand the French delegates to the conference should take on the question of the maintenance of the Franco-Belgian railroad men on the Rhineland system.

The French and Belgians both are holding out for maintaining their nationals on the German railways. The French also demand that they be assured the Germans will fill their orders for dyes and coke necessary to insure the future of the Alsatian Steel and textile industries. These demands are affording further obstacles to an immediate agreement in London.

There will be no meeting of the "big fourteen" tomorrow but the two committees will meet.

How to build up your Weight

To be under weight—You prove low fighting power in the body. It often means you are minus nerve-power, minus red-blood cells in your blood, minus health, minus vitality. It is serious to be minus, but the moment you increase the number of your red-blood-cells, you begin to become plus. That's why S. S. S. since 1876, has meant to thousands of underweight men and women, a plus in their strength. Your body fills to the point of power, your flesh becomes firmer, the age lines that come from thinness disappear. You look younger, fresher, happier, and you feel it, too, all over your body. More red-blood-cells! S. S. S. will build them.

S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

New Gods for Old

HEIRS APPARENT. By Philip Gibbs. New York: George H. Doran Company, 1924. $2.00.

Reviewed by HENRY H. CALDWELL

A young Oxford student, questioned on international problems, resorts to repartee. "See the papers," he will say, "I understand Europe better than you do." "What do you want from Germany?" asks one of a French acquaintance. "You were paid when you proved that Beethoven was a Belgian."

If we are to believe what M. Paul Souday tells us in a recent article, literature, art, and athletics engross the time and interest of Oxford undergraduates; politics and the rehabilitation of Europe bore them. And the indictment is supplemented and enforced by Sir Philip Gibbs' new novel, "Heirs Apparent."

The leading characters in "Heirs Apparent" are most of them sons of the rich and well-to-do. They range in age from eighteen to twenty-five. They have had a chance at the best education England affords. Obviously, then, they are of the class of which one expects great things—leadership, for instance. They are, in short, the heirs apparent to the problems of the next twenty or thirty years.

There is Julian Perryam, grey-eyed and handsome, the son of the editor of The Week, a London periodical of huge circulation and mottled ethics. There is Audrey Nye, daughter of a most lovable country parson, a girl with plenty of "bop," and a strong gust for "good times." There is Victor Buckland, son of the proprietor of The Week, a war hero, greedy for girls and liquor.

There is Evelyn Iffield, petite and sophisticated, herself a veteran of the "late unmentionables," already a widow, and upon her introduction to her, the wife of old Major Iffield, whom she has wed for reasons not at once apparent. There is Janet Perryam, blond and pert, tremendously sure of herself and of the fastness of those old Victorians.

The heirs apparent are disclosed as joyous, cynical, unreligious, selfish, and pleasure-loving; militant for the open mind; Elitist; the rights of the individual; and the privileges of the rising generation—"The League of Youth"—as against the autocracy of the Victorians, their parents and guardians. They lay claim to greater poise of character and superior penetration (derived no one knows whence) both of which, duly tried, are found wanting.

Mr. Inelbald in "Nature and Art" has one of these prodigies under the glass when she writes, "He would at times venture to give his opinion, contradict, and even act in opposition to persons whom long experience and the approbation of the world had placed in situations which claimed his implicit reverence and submission"; the young Elfin, son of Barnard the Buzze, turning upon Job and his "clavers," is a still earlier example: "Great men are not always wise, neither do the aged understand judgment."

But the adoption of their own principles by their parents, sisters, and brothers, excites these young Nestors to protests quite similar to those of the early Victorians. And when, in their own persons, the adamant of the new dispensation proves not clay, they begin to wonder if the Victorians are not right, after all.

What is the conclusion of the matter? In the simplest terms, this: that skepticism and egotism alone are no substitute for a code of ethics; that certain rules of caution and propriety are needful in all ages, from the very nature of the human constitution; and that the young, especially of the wealthy and well-to-do, need some measure of economic responsibility at an earlier age than appears now to be the case.

The blame is not wholly chargeable to the rising generation. It is shared by the parents and by the modes of education. The English universities are too esthetic in their interests. The parents lack constructiveness and decisions. They wait until their sons and daughters have grown up in idleness and luxury, and then marvel at their want of principle and respect for the ordinary conventions. They ask their children what they propose doing for a sheltered Europe, before those children have learned what to do for themselves.

Says Henry James, the grizzled old journalist: "I want to teach you to save yourselves." He would appear to be somewhat lacking on the job, but better late than never. Julian's grandfather is of much the same view. An interesting character he, with an uncanny presence not unlike that of the grandfather in Maeterlinck's "Intruder."

The novel would appear to be within its scope, quite true to life. Technically, too, it has decided merits. Its forty-five chapters show episodes well conceived and presented both for moral and interest. Dialogue and incident are quite modern in treatment. That is, they are at all times significant and fast-moving.

Two things of worth the modern novelist has done: he has reduced the scope of his action—in other words, he has concentrated and intensified it (perhaps under the influence of the short story) —and he has mastered transition. He trusts more to the reader's acumen and imagination than did Fielding, Smollett, Dickens, or even Thackeray, with their lengthy dialogues and interpolations.

Chapter One of "Heirs Apparent" is as good an illustration as any in the book, of the laconicism peculiar to the modern novel. Morley Roberts' "The Plunderers," and W. B. Maxwell's "Vivien" afford many other examples. Did space permit, however, and the occasion give perhaps larger warrant, one might consider what we have lost in power and significance since the eighteenth century.

The influences that chiefly work a change in the viewpoints of Julian Perryam and Audrey Nye are nicely correspondent. In Julian's case, it is his mother and sister. In Audrey's case, it is his father and brother. The arrangement is a little mechanical, but it makes for emphasis. The use of slang is frequent. One wonders whether such a novel will be quite intelligible without a glossary say thirty years hence. If so, one fears that the future vogue of much literature now being produced will be circumscribed, whatever the merits of the matter.

One thing that raises "Heirs Apparent" above such novels as, say, "Main Street," is its optimism and constructiveness. It points a way out of the valley of tribulation. It brings a charge, but it also suggests a remedy. That alone is worth our approval.

A Rejoinder

Literary Editor, The Journal: Sir: Mr. Kearns' unfeeling criticism of my free verse poem, "Themes in a Minor Key," and your own well-meant statement that no defense is offered for it, argue me to action.

I think a defense should be offered; I beg to offer a defense. No criminal, however black his guilt, but the law recognizes that he is entitled to a defense. Mr. Kearns assails my verse-making ability. No one ever claimed that the stanzas published under the above title were verses. In order to remove Mr. Kearns' objection and take myself out of the class of mediocre writers of mawkish so-called verses, I will say that they are not verses. Let us call them "contraptions."

Mr. Kearns takes himself too seriously. I, like he, once detested free verse. Now that I see the possibilities in it, I am for it. I shall write no more free verse, for perfection cannot be improved upon. To have the phrase "positive lack of merit" hurled at my composition is enough success for one lifetime. I shall be known to fame as the fellow that Kearns came to perdition.

I wonder if Mr. Kearns ever read the Bible. Does it give him angry to hear the psalms spoken of as poetry? They are not written in regular verse form. Has he edited his own special copy so that all the rough, homely words and expressions are blotted out? Does he consider that the writer of, say, the Song of Solomon "vulgarized his art"? What does he think of the ancient writings of the Hindus? The Chinese?

Who ever gave Kearns a license to detect lack of conscientiousness in others?

I think what Kearns needs most is that form of education that we call experience; knowledge of man and of the world, without which no poet has any message at all. And with a sincere desire to do him good I am sending you my latest composition—I refuse to call it either poem or verse, having definitely discarded both terms forever, seeing what havoc can be wrought with them. This composition, "To a Young Poet," is dedicated to Mr. Kearns.

GEORGE S. SEYMOUR, Chicago, July 28.

Communication

Literary Editor, The Journal: Sir: I can't help wondering what was the matter with Mr. H. H. Caldwell when he read "The Lady Weaver" and "Other Poems." Does he really mean that he doesn't understand "The Weaver"? And how does he miss the sonnet beginning, "Euclid alone has looked on beauty bare," in mentioning the most unique artistic and beautiful?

I believe the key to the situation lies in his statement that we not only want but need poetry to give us "strength and encouragement in the mid of times, we all unfortunately feel." I'll bet his favorite poem is "The Psalm of Life."

Edna has her faults, but I don't think Mr. Caldwell was quite fair with this interesting group of poems. Please forgive my rantings, but I like the lady very much, and feel urged to defend her.

GENEVA GREGORY, Decatur, August 4.

SHERWOOD ANDERSON

In the Century for August, Sherwood Anderson relates how he forsook business for literature. Additional details of his life will be found in his autobiography, "A Story Teller's Story," to be issued this fall. It is the tale of an American business man who grew tired of the work of buying and selling and dictating, and who walked out of his factory into the field of literature.

Mr. Anderson is spending the summer months at New Orleans. He is planning to lecture extensively during the coming winter.

POEMS CHOSEN FOR LOCAL ANTHOLOGY

Fifteen Writers Represented in Collection of Jacksonville Verse.

Twenty-three poems from fifteen writers will appear in the Journal's centennial anthology of Jacksonville verse, according to the editorial committee's final selection, made a few days ago. The copy will be ready for the printer next Monday, which, barring unexpected delays, will enable the book to be on sale before the end of this month. The binding will be of pale green, padded art paper.

The selecting of poems for inclusion in this collection was made after a public appeal for contributions. In order to make the anthology more representative, it was decided not to include more than four poems from any one writer. Several of the poems selected have appeared previously in periodicals of national circulation, such as the American Poetry Magazine, the Christian Century, the New York Times, the New York Herald, and the Chicago Tribune.

Verse writers whose work is to appear in the forthcoming volume are as follows:

William A. Bartlett, Henry H. Caldwell, William S. Camp, Wayne Gard, M. H. Grassly, Susie A. Hughes, Anne Wakely Jackson, John Kearns, Margaret King Moore, S. W. Nichols, Martha Camp Oliver, Ernest C. Rutherford, Robert V. Shoemaker, Ida Scott Taylor, E. Bernice Wood.

JOSEPH CONRAD JOINS THE GREAT IMMORTALS

The world of living authors is not as rich as it was a week ago, for Joseph Conrad, aged sixty-seven, died last Sunday at his home near Canterbury, England. Conrad was one of the greatest authors of the twentieth century. His tales of the sea are the envy of every living fiction writer. Like Thomas Hardy, he had the unusual privilege of living to see his books accepted as classics.

In the first issue of this book page, Anne Wakely Jackson reviewed Conrad's latest book, "The Rover." In discussing Conrad as an author, Mr. Jackson said: "That so fine and rare a literary artist should be widely read is a thing to be thankful for, whatever the reason may be. Conrad, though a Pole by birth, who knew not a word of English until he was grown, and whose English instead of French was his medium of expression because of his admiration of English and Scotch seamen, is one of the few great English stylists living today. And furthermore, though born and bred in an inland country, and never beholding the sea until he was eighteen, or twenty years old, he is one of the greatest writers of sea stories who ever lived."

Conrad visited America only once—just a year before his death. That our soil was touched by his feet will be a source of satisfaction to Conrad's innumerable admirers in this country.

The Chicago Literary Times, a radical, best issued by Ben Hecht and Max H. Baerheim, has ceased publication.

Arthur Machen's latest novel, "Ornaments in Jade," has been published in a limited edition of one thousand copies by Knott.

George Callaghan was a Franklin elder in the city Friday.

TO A YOUNG POET

When in the fullness of accomplished years
You dwell upon the record of years past,
Counting the hopes, the fears
That justified or came to naught at last,
These be the riches that your toil has gained—
Peace, and the kingdom of the printed page,
A little of youth's madness still retained
Bright through the sober circumstance of age.

Let there be faith in what is past and done;
Do not deny the words your heart has spoken;
Keep your engagement with the rising sun
Unbroken;
Never regard the journey as complete
And rest at idle ease beneath the bays,
But turn your travelled feet
Rather to new and unfrequented ways.

And let there be no discord in your song,
No hidden purpose potent of distress,
Marring a measure that should sail along
Untroubled on a sea of loveliness.
Clearer than starlight let your message shine,
So it be said of you when all is done;
"He wrote the perfect line
And never took advice of anyone."

—GEORGE STEELE SEYMOUR.

SATURDAY REVIEW IN INITIAL ISSUE

"Timely and timeless" is the motto adopted by The Saturday Review of Literature, of which the first issue, dated August 2, is now before the public. This new critical weekly, as previously announced in the Journal, is edited by Henry Seidel Canby and the entire former staff of The Literary Review of the New York Evening Post. The associate editors are William Rose Benet and Amy Loveman. Christopher Morley, former columnist for the Evening Post, is contributing editor of The Saturday Review.

"The modern fashion," writes Dr. Canby, "does not regard literature—or at least contemporary literature—as a harsh and crabbed female, but rather as a much advertised show girl, bought and paid for, and to be written about as much as a word. A great poet cannot be so approached. In the hearts of those who assess good writing as if it were pig iron or ladies' hose, good humor and sympathy are dead as soon as born. No affection or wit or enthusiasm can take their place."

"Criticism, which is part of the living fabric of contemporary literature, must be keenly aware of both past and present, and a partisan of both. It must be like a modern university where one seeks principles, but also works in laboratories of immediate experience amidst the vivid confusion of experiment. In one guise a graybeard philosopher, searching for the best, but also in the mood of youth, watching the three-ring show under the great tent of today—yet discriminating in both—that is the double function of this review."

The Saturday Review is similar in appearance to The Literary Review which its editors formerly conducted, but is printed on better paper. Instead of being issued as a weekly supplement of a daily newspaper, the new review is published by the publishers of Time, the weekly news-magazine. Contributors to the first issue include, besides the editors, Edwin Arlington Robinson, William McFee, Richard Aldington, Bertrand Russell, Oswald Garrison Villard, Mary Austin, and Christopher Ward.

The reader who desires an independent, competent, and keenly critical review of current literature will find The Saturday Review his one indispensable paper.

TO ERECT STATUE OF GUY DE MAUPASSANT

Admirers of Guy de Maupassant have organized a committee for the purpose of erecting a statue of the author in his native village. A copy of the bronze bust by Roud Verlet, which now adorns the Square Solferino, Rouen, will soon be placed in the grounds of the Chateau de Mirameau, Maupassant's birthplace, near the village of Tourville-sur-Arques.

Six hundred volumes from the library of the late William Marion Reddy, many of them first editions of authors of our own time and many presentation and inscribed copies, have been presented to the St. Louis Public Library by Mrs. Reddy.

Joan of Arc

SAINT JOAN. By Bernard Shaw. New York: Brentano's, 1924. $2.25.

Reviewed by WAYNE GARD

An English joykiller has come forward ungraciously to inform us that the Anglo-Sax was invented by Pope Alexander VI, who was born the year after Joan was murdered. Now when we witnessed Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" at New Theater, London, we thought the pealing of the cathedral chimes miraculously impressive—and, history or no history, we aren't going to allow Mr. Shaw to change that part of his play.

Joan of Arc, whose biographers already have included such notables as Anatole France, Mark Twain, and Andrew Lang, is an ideal character for stage poetry. Like Abraham Lincoln, she owes much of her immortality to the manner of her death, but she nevertheless lived so romantically that we sit absorbed for over three hours while Mr. Shaw depicts the high spots of her career.

In "Saint Joan," the Maid of Orleans rides again, and her story brings pity and terror. We should be exceedingly depressed but for the mirthful and witty dialogues which the author has interspersed in most of the six scenes. Indeed, he switches us from laughter to tears and back again so frequently that we hardly can label our emotions. No one but Shaw could get away with so much mirth in a play which is primarily tragic.

We laugh first at the helpless gestures of Charles, the Dauphin, who waffles under the thumbs of his military and ecclesiastical despots. Later we are introduced to the self-satisfied Earl of Warwick, who moulds his religion and his politics to suit his personal advantage; and to his chaplain, who amuses us by so often allowing his fanatic patriotism to get the better of his judgment—until his wretched character is transformed at the burning of Joan.

Shaw finds many opportunities to dig at the English for their cool opinion of themselves, yet these thrusts are swallowed with much relish by London audiences. We fear that our "100 per cent" Americans are less generous toward their caricatures.

The Maid is presented as an unpollished country girl who believes herself inspired by "voices," and who fears neither man nor devil. She becomes the first nationalist and the first Protestant. The French courtiers to whom she offers her services make use of Joan until she has served their purpose, then discard her to her fate. In the end, they are as anxious as the English to have her put out of the way.

Shaw's iconoclasm takes an unexpected turn when we find him defending the motives of the Inquisitors who conducted Joan's trial. His purpose is to show that the trial was altogether fair, and that Joan's prosecutors and judges acted in accordance with the best light they had. Thus the canonization of Joan by the Roman church in 1920 is made less inconsistent.

We were at first angry with Shaw for tacking on the Epilogue. The play at the end of the sixth scene seemed completely and gloriously ended. Why drag it out? And why attach to a thoroughly realistic play an impossible dream? But, after all, we need something to bring us back to our own environment. And we can pardon the wily dramatist for wanting to call our attention to his moral—that if Joan were living today she would fare little better than she did in the fifteenth century.

When Joan in the dream suggests returning to earth, her former associates shamefacedly discourage her proposal, and hurriedly take leave. Warwick regrets the little mistake of 1431, but explains that political necessities, though occasionally erroneous, are still imperative, then steals discreetly away. The archbishop hopes one day to enter into her blessedness. "Meanwhile, however," and he is gone.

The "envoy" from the Vatican announces: "The possibility of your resurrection was not contemplated in the recent proceedings for your canonization. I must return to Rome for fresh instructions."

Thus the venerable satirist makes his most violent thrust. We honor Joan, he implies, but we prefer her at a distance.

A woman, said to have forged hundreds of our own letters of ex-Kaiser William and members of his family, General Hindenburg, and other celebrities of the World War, has been prosecuted for swindling, convicted, and sentenced to a year and six months in prison.

POETS OF ILLINOIS LEAD THE NATION

Poets of Illinois have produced more genuine, sincere poetry than those of any other state in the Union, according to Mattie P. Simmonds, assistant professor of English literature at Illinois Wesleyan university, Bloomington, in speaking at McGregor, Iowa, to the Bookfellows of four states. After weighing carefully the American verse of today, she declared her opinion that the contest, if there is one, lies between Illinois poets and those of New England.

Miss Simmonds named five Illinois poets as "the most violently discussed poets in America."

"These are our greatest," she said, "Harriet Monroe, the critic friend, and publisher for new poets; a poet to give something of truth and beauty to the world; Edgar Lee Masters, the realistic portrayal of homely village life; Vachel Lindsay, the artist singer of beauty and dreams, the collector of the years gone by, the years ahead, and today, into one poem, significant atmosphere; Carl Sandburg, the voice of the people, of industry and labor and state."

Among others, Miss Simmonds named Agnes Lee, Eunice Tietjen, Charles Granger Blandin, Frances Wells Shaw, and Louisa Ayers Garnett, as having contributed to the reputation of the state.

MANCHESTER NEWS NOTES

Manchester, Aug. 8.—James Smith has been rather poorly for a week, but is about town.

Mrs. John Duncan enjoyed a visit on Tuesday from her niece, Miss Ethel Whitlock of Santa Anna, Cal.

Miss Whitlock taught in our local school several years ago and is well remembered by many. She reports the family as being well and well-satisfied with their location. The family left the vicinity of Franklin, Ill., at the time Miss Ethel closed her school here, and started at once touring to the coast state, where they expect to remain in the future.

Miss Whitlock went from here to White Hall to visit her cousin, Mrs. Eldred Murphy, but will return west in time to begin her school. For the past two months she has visited almost from coast to coast. After spending a brief time in New Orleans, she went to New York City, Washington, D. C., and came back by a northern route.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Duncan entertained on Friday the Rev. Morgan and family, and on Wednesday visited their son, H. G. Duncan and family in Roodhouse.

The R. N. A. and M. W. A. lodges are preparing for a big time on Aug. 27 at which time they are to give the burgo and fish fry picnic. A program will be given which will be second to none, and all the devices procurable for the enjoyment of picnickers will be provided.

Word was received here Wednesday, Aug. 6, of the death of George W. Matthews in Jacksonville. Mr. Matthews was a life long resident of Manchester vicinity and of the village for many years. He was one of the prominent business men here managing the "Only Way Hotel," and livery barn and operating a couple of threshing machines, balers and other farm machinery, his health failing after the destruction by fire of his hotel and barn, the family family moved a year ago to Jacksonville where he has been completely broken in health. His age was near 70 years, and death was not unexpected.

He leaves his wife, one son, Lawrence, of Jacksonville, and five daughters, all living. Mrs. Minnie Crowe, of Clements; Mrs. Gertrude Godby, of Roodhouse; Mrs. Christina McCarty, of Winchester, and Mrs. Ada Pennel of Jacksonville, and an adopted son, Harvey Ainsworth, also of Jacksonville. The funeral will be in Jacksonville on Friday and burial in the Edwards cemetery near Alsey.

Members of the Christian church congregation will be interested in learning that their recent pastor, Rev. Z. M. Brubek has the pastorate at Franklin and Scottville. At the latter place his congregation numbers ordinarily 250.

The work of "doing over" the new lachmet property on South Main street is about finished and the house ready for a possible tenant.

Rev. H. M. Ingram on Tuesday accompanied Mrs. Ingram's mother, Mrs. Emily French to Greentop, Mo., where she will remain for a time with another daughter, Mrs. Emma Boone. Mrs. French is a remarkable woman, well past eighty and of sweetness and strength of character will long be remembered by all who met her during her sojourn at the parsonage. She spends about six months of each year with Mrs. Ingram. The departure before long of Rev. Ingram for a new field will be a decided loss to the community. His work here has been most meritorious.

Mrs. Henry Bell attended the Alsey picnic Wednesday.

Among those in attendance at the Murrayville picnic Wednesday were Mrs. Cernick Andras and family; Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Kelley and family; Charles Walker and family; William Walker and family; G. D. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. John Thady, Norma Thady, Hazel Greenwalt, Alder Greenwalt and Walter Whitehead and family.

Charles Whiteside and Stanley Vermillion of White Hall were Manchester visitors the first of the week.

Some moving of the weeds in streets of the town has been done, but several streets are still in need of attention.

SHENANDOAH MOORING TEST IS SUCCESSFUL

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 8.—The navy dirigible Shenandoah was moored to the special mooring mast on the U. S. S. Patoka at 8 o'clock tonight in Narragansett Bay. She will undergo a test of the Mobile anchorage tonight.

The mooring of the dirigible was accomplished in about an hour. There was scarcely a ripple on Narragansett Bay when at 7 o'clock the Shenandoah slowly dropped down and let fall about 1,000 feet of line. This was picked up by the Patoka and slowly drawn into the mast on the stern. The point picked for the mooring operation was off Prudence Island, where the tide rip was at its lowest. Prospects were for almost perfect weather tonight.

The problem of "where shall I send my child to high school" is now agitating many parents. There are about fifty high school students from this territory for whom tuition must be paid elsewhere since the voters have refused to erect a school building or to add to the present one, so that it shall conform to the standard. Never since the establishment of a high school here many years ago, has there been without a high school until the present year. With all its abundant wealth, the community has definitely voted against education, and against progress. It is hoped by all the better element of the community that the situation may be improved before another year.

Billy Evans SAYS

Is it better to have had a fast ball and lost it than never to have pitched one?

In the major leagues today a good fast ball is considered most essential to success. The pitcher who lacks one is decidedly up against it.

True few pitchers are able to use a fast ball as a steady diet for the batters and get away with it, yet it is a great weapon when used as a threat.

The majority of the present-day pitching stars achieve success because of their varied assortment of stuff and the ability to mix it up.

In the success of this system, speed plays a prominent part. When the curve or the slow one loses its power of deception, the pitcher has the old fast ball in reserve, something a little different.

It is for the pinch that speed proves a great weapon for the pitcher. It forces the batsman to look over his best bet, drives him back from the plate, carries with it a striking threat.

Only a few pitchers boast a great fast ball, one of terrific speed. Such a fast ball is a gift of nature, the result of an easy motion backed by great power.

It is such a pitcher who keenly feels the loss of the fast one, unless he prepares for such a happening.

Unless the pitcher endowed with a great fast ball puts thought into his work, learns the tricks of the trade, it is better never to have had a speed ball.

I could name a score of pitchers who believed big league fame entirely due to the great fast ball they possessed. Literally these pitchers threw the ball by the batter, figuring they couldn't hit what they couldn't see.

When the old fast ball began to lose its zip the batters, quick to discover it, took advantage of the fact, and soon the pitcher passed out from under the big tent. He failed to provide for the day when the fast one lost some of its swift, as Nick Altrock would say.

Walter Johnson, Grover Alexander and Joe Bush are a trio of great pitchers who won early fame because of their terrific speed, the ability to throw them by the batter. No longer do they resort to speed exclusively, yet they continue star twirlers.

Johnson, Alexander and Bush had a thought for the future. They developed a pitching style that would carry on after the fast one lost its bullet-like speed.

The career of this great trio should serve as a lesson to every pitcher who yearns for a long career.

Medalists Too Good In First Round

Unable to Keep up Hot Pace For Week, and Slump in Match Play

How did the idea get around that the player scoring lowest in a qualifying round could not win the championship? You hear much of the jinx which supposedly encircles the neck of the golf medalist. It is the ghost story of the links.

Let a contestant go out and lead his field in the qualifying test and he had as well hang up his sticks without further ceremony, for the witches and the goblins in the bunkers will terrorize him into defeat the very next day or shortly thereafter.

This is a popular myth and many of the star players believe it to be so. So great is their belief that they purposely throw away strokes in order to escape winning the medal.

Now what is the answer? Is a golf medalist invariably doomed? Don't be foolish. A lot of medalists have won national championships. Walter Travis won two national titles after leading qualifying fields. H. Chandler Egan didn't find the medal, a handicap card in 1904. Neither did Bob Gardner in 1909, or Harold Hilton in 1911, or Davey Hopper in 1919.

Since 1910 five women medalists have gone on to win the national championship in this country, namely, Dorothy Campbell, Gladys Ravenscroft, Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, Alexa Stirling and Glenna Collett. If nothing else these instances show the medalist is not necessarily whipped in the beginning. It is true a big percentage of the medalists fail to survive the finals. A bit of research work would probably show that players who ranked second and third in the medalist fall just about as often.

This brings you to a probable explanation. If you are good enough to lead your field on opening day it is proof you are playing your best golf. Tournament usually last a week. Golf form is elusive. Few can hold the thin edge of perfection that long.

The medalist begins to bog down in the middle once the big fight starts and soon he is erased from the scene. Some other player who barely qualified, perhaps, will come along, getting better as the rounds pass, and win out. Medalists aren't jinxed. They merely reach top form ahead of time.

MAYBE!

AMERICAN LEAGUE IS LEADER IN ABILITY

Statistics Show That Junior Organization Has Better Record Than National Circuit

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Home run hitters of the American League, in individual ability, have the edge on their National League rivals for the season according to figures compiled here and which include Thursday's games despite the fact that the senior organization has a total of 350 homers and the junior circuit only 296.

The National League in smashing out its total of four baggers required the services of 100 players while the American League army numbered only 71, giving the junior league sluggers an average of four homers per man, while the average of each player in the older organization is 3.5.

The Ban Johnson circuit boasts the king of home run hitters in "Babe" Ruth of the Yankees, who in 1921 established a record of 59 homers for a season, and the big southpaw slugger, giving indications of again attaining, and perhaps bettering, that mark.

At the time the figures were compiled Ruth had 36 homers which is only a few behind the number he had for the same period during his race to the record.

The leading home run clouter in the National League is Jack Fournier of the Dodgers, who is setting the pace with 22. Behind Fournier are Kelly of the Giants with 14, Hornsby of the Cardinals with 16, Hartnett of the Cubs with 15 and Williams of the Phillies with 12. The others are strung along with one and two with a few as high as eight.

The junior circuit boasts only four men having double figures but their total is far in excess of their National League rivals. Besides Ruth there is Hauser of the Athletics with 20, Williams of the Browns with 16 and Jacobson of the Browns with 15.

The others range from a single four bagger to nine, numerous players hovering around this point.

THE NUT CRACKER
by Joe Williams

Perhaps you've noticed that most fights are held in bowls these days. But don't get the idea that the amateur lads make hash of one another.

One look at the averages convinces you Goslin of the Washingtons is no lame duck at bat.

The forest fires on the Pacific coast have all been extinguished, including Hiram Johnson.

Our idea of the millennium is a bit foggy but any proposition assuring eight pennant winners in one league will answer the purpose.

Mr. Huggins admits the Yankees are shot but neglects to say with what.

Heilmann blames his batting slump on a small pox treatment. In other words, the doctors, not the pitchers, made him look sick.

The experts say Sisler is off 30 percent. It is now up to Sisler to say how much the experts are off.

The Swiss navy may be a joke but the Swiss crew in the Olympics was nothing to guffaw about.

Bob LaFollette is an advocate of progressive principles and we suppose he favors going from first to third on an infield out all the time.

Ajax was defying the finest when two of the city's lightest stroled by. "Funny what that synthetic gin will make a man do, ain't it?" they commented, amusedly.

If Battling Siki's recent inactivity is due to a lack of ideas he might try going over Niagara Falls in a paper drinking cup.

Connie Mack plans to turn the Athletics over to his son Earl, who evidently is guilty of some terrible crime against the old gent.

MORGAN COUNTY TEAM DEFEATS CASS NINE

Local Team Are Victorious in Game with Cass County Farm Bureau Team Yesterday Afternoon by Score of 8 to 2

The Morgan County Farm Bureau baseball team journeyed to Arroyville yesterday afternoon and defeated the Cass county farmers by a score of 8 to 2. Both teams played a good brand of ball but the Cass county stickers were unable to connect for a sufficient number of hits off Jewsbury to push the winning runs across.

The battery for Morgan was C. Jewsbury and McDaniel and for Cass, Burns and Herman. Yesterday's victory gives the locals two wins out of three games played this summer and they hope to annex a third victory when they meet the Sangamon county nine soon.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—A sharp break of 6 1/2 points in east iron pipe unsettled today's stock market after an early period of strength due to active short covering prompted by the cut in the local federal reserve rediscount rate. Sales fell below the million share mark for third consecutive day.

Active trading took place in the shares of the railroads mentioned in connection with the Nickel
Plate merger, the trade endeavoring to adjust prices with the proposed exchange ratios.
"Nickel Plate" common soared
5 1/2 points to 114 1/2, a new top and then dropped back 3.
Special buying was again noted in the Anthracite coal carriers, Lackawanna and Delaware and Hudson establishing new 1924 maximum quotations 139 1/2 and 129 respectively. U. S.
Steel common sold as high as 108 1/2 but reacted later off 1.
Bullish demonstrations continued in a number of specialties.
General Baking, Foundation company, American Radiator and Fullman being among the dozen stocks to break their previous high prices.

The further reduction in call rediscount rate had no immediate effect on the money rates.

ONE OF LOCAL BOYS TO GO TO NEW YORK

Now Up to Winners in Near East Bond Sale to Decide Which Will Make Trip to Coast — Boys Decide to Continue Soliciting.

Either George Lukeman, Jr., or Malcolm Greenleaf will get a free trip to New York to bid goodby to Jackie Coogan when he sails with his relief ship on Sept. 6 for the Near East. This was made plain yesterday in a telegram received at the Chamber of Commerce from the relief campaign headquarters in Chicago. Although the sale of Mercey bonds in Illinois is to be continued until Sept. 1, this will not bar one of the boys from the honors of the trip, but if any child in the state sells more bonds than either of the local boys during the extended time, there will simply be another winner from Illinois to take the New York trip.

However, it is the hope of the leaders that the local boys will continue the sale of bonds, work off their tie of $51 each, and still keep ahead of the game in the state. The problem lies in deciding whether Lukeman or Greenleaf will go to New York. The boys are given the choice of working off the tie by selling more bonds in competition, drawing lots for the honor of the trip, or if neither of them wish to go to New York, they may receive the railway fare from here to New York and divide it between them.

Both boys were pepped up by the telegram from Chicago and have decided to continue to sell the bonds. They appeared at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday and secured a new batch of the bonds, preparatory to starting on more soliciting today. It is practically up to the boys to decide as to which of them will make the trip to New York.

LOCAL POLICE FIND CAR AND NAB YOUTHS

Two Young Men from White Hall Arrested for Theft of Car and Returned to Greene County—Admit Taking Machine

Ira Dugger and G. E. Kelly, White Hall youths, were arrested here yesterday morning by police on suspicion of having stolen an auto in White Hall Thursday night. The machine was found on the hard road near Arnold, where it had been abandoned when the supply of gasoline was exhausted. The car was a Ford coupe belonging to Arthur Peters of White Hall.

Upon being questioned by police, Kelly and Dugger admitted that they had taken the car, driving it from White Hall to Springfield, and then started for Jacksonville. Lack of gasoline compelled them to abandon the machine.

BICYCLES STOLEN WHILE BOYS SWIM

Three Jacksonville boys, Ivan Smith, Shelby Vasconcellos and Paul Cooney, were compelled to walk home from Ashely pond last night after enjoying a swim. The boys had ridden their bicycles to the pond, and while they were in the water, someone took the wheels and disappeared.

The boys notified police, and an effort is being made by officers to recover the stolen property. It is believed that some other boys took the bicycles, probably for a joke, and that they will be found in a short time.

UNINTENTIONAL OMISSION

In the account of the musical entertainment at the Hopper home Thursday evening, mention should have been made that a musical number given by Mrs. C. R. Short and daughters was very much appreciated. Miss Frances Atkins was present and in a very entertaining manner gave several readings that were very much enjoyed by those present. ## ROTARIANS HEALTH TALK BY DR. MANN

Films Show Benefits of Vaccination For Small Pox and Diphtheria

If Dr. T. A. Mann, county health officer, continues his good work, every resident of Morgan county will know about the advantages of vaccination as a preventative of both smallpox and diphtheria. Dr. Mann made the principal address at the Friday luncheon of the Rotary club, held at the Pacific hotel, when he exhibited two films of pictures to show interesting facts about both smallpox and diphtheria.

Dr. Mann was introduced by R. W. Woolston, president of the club. Among the guests present was Rev. A. E. Beddoes of Beardstown, who is pastor of the Congregational church in that town and a member of the Rotary club. Rev. Mr. Beddoes made a brief reference to the international convention at Toronto which he attended, and gave in a very brief way his thoughts about Rotary, which he considers next to the church as the greatest present day force for righteousness.

The film that Dr. Mann used about smallpox gave in the beginning some statistics to show that there has been an increase in the disease in recent years in all parts of the U. S., because of the lack of effective measures for prevention. He mentioned the prevalence of the disease in recent months, both in Detroit and Pittsburgh. The pictures then explained the simple processes of modern vaccination, which confer a minimum of inconvenience to either child or adult and for a period of years furnish immunity from the disease.

In the film relating to diphtheria the pictures showed the Schick test as applied to many children. By means of this very simple test it is possible to tell whether or not a person is immune to diphtheria and if not then vaccination is resorted to as a preventative.

Dr. Mann stated in the city of New York alone in the past twelve months has vaccinated 300,000 to make them safe from the ravages of smallpox and diphtheria. Emphasis was laid upon the fact that vaccination is important in childhood because weaknesses which follow disease then are often responsible for the ailments which come in the adult's years. Then the pictures Rotarians gained a clearer idea than before of what public health means and can mean.

CARD FRENCH ACTING AS PARK LIFE GUARD

Card French has been appointed temporary life guard at the Nichols park swimming pool, during the absence of Ernest Bray who will be in Camp Grant for two weeks training with units of the Illinois National Guard.

In view of the number of accidents which have occurred in the vicinity of the park play grounds, in which children have been run down by automobiles it is probable that the drive which now passes close to the playground on the east may be changed to skirt the lake on the south side after crossing the bridge by turning to the right and then circle the playground and enter the camp grounds proper at the same point as at present.

TOURISTS FROM HERE HAVE STORMY VOYAGE

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Graff, Miss Elizabeth Graff and Miss Rhoda Olds returned last night from ten days of camp life in the Wisconsin Dells a famous summer camping spot. They were stopping at the Devil's Lake resort, which is a city of a thousand tents. The local tourists passed thru one of the severest storms that have been visiting that section since last Sunday evening.

The Devil's Lake camp was visited by a heavy rain Sunday, which became a cloudburst. Tents were flooded and many articles of camp equipment were set afloat. The Jacksonville people left camp Tuesday morning, driving home by way of Milwaukee and Chicago. On the road between these two cities, they drove thru a downing Wednesday, which necessitated careful piloting of the car. Chicago and surrounding cities were deep in fog, and when the travelers reached Sheridan Road, they found water up to the hubs of the car. In some places the water came into the body of the car and articles in the bottom of the trunk were soaked.

The party camped Thursday evening in Chicago Heights and made the remainder of the trip home yesterday. On the way to Wisconsin they stopped one night at Starved Rock.
